CUSHMAN, Ark., June 10.—(AP)—R. M. Patterson, Main street merchant, has devised as novel means of telling to his meals on time at the same time saving his neighbors the confusion of a dinner bell.

Patterson lives on a hill about two blocks from Main street. When his meals are ready, his wife raises a white flag aloft the family staff, and Patterson with a ready eye for that particular landmark, closes shop and hikes home to eat.

Surgeon Issues Warning Against Drinking 'Jake'

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 10.—(AP)—Stating that railroad hospitals were treating several "Jake" paralysis cases, B. Zeinert, chief surgeon of the Missouri Pacific hospital association, has issued a warning "regarding Jammala ginger" in the current issue of the Missouri Pacific Lines Magazine.

His warning as it appeared in the magazine follows:

"The Missouri Pacific Hospital Association is now treating several cases who have imbibed 'NOT' wisely of Jammala ginger. The results of Jammala ginger are, indeed, serious. Many patients remain paralyzed for months. This is a great economic loss both to the individual and to the railroad. The paralysis may develop several weeks after drinking 'NOT' over four tablespoonfuls of Jammala ginger. Other alcoholic drinks may contain this poison."

Expect Over 200 At Encampment

To Be Held Friday and Saturday of This Week at Local Station

The first Hempstead County 4-H Club camp will be held Friday and Saturday of this week according to announcement made today by the County Farm and Home Demonstration Agents Martha Jane Buecher and Lynn Smith.

Previous to this year a club rally has been held but an encampment was planned this year to more nearly meet the needs of the 500 4-H club members in the county. Only those 4-H club members are allowed to attend who are in good standing by having a project and records up to date.

Over 200 members have made reservations up to June 9. The camp will be held at the Fruit and Truck Experiment Station where adequate shelter will be provided for the club members. Friday night. Each club member has been sent a list of the materials he or she is supposed to bring.

The program will open Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Saturday afternoon a special parents' program is planned and the parent of every child is urged to be present for this special feature.

If there are those 4-H club members who have not yet received a list of materials to bring and who are eligible club members to attend the camp, by having the project and records properly examined, they should see their county agents at once.

Geo. W. Schooley Runs For Sheriff

Well Known Farmer and Stockman Enters the County Campaign

George W. Schooley, prominent farmer and stockman residing four miles north of Hope, authorized The Star to announce his candidacy for Sheriff and Collector of Hempstead county, today.

Mr. Schooley, better known to the people of this county as "George," states: "I have lived in this county all my mature life, engaged in the occupation of farming. I am the father of 13 children, all born in this county and ten living in this county at present."

"I served as constable of Saline township and carried a special commission as deputy sheriff under two administrations."

"The duties of Sheriff of Hempstead county require a man to possess those qualities of patience, courage, and a thorough understanding of his fellow man. O believe I possess these."

"I believe the sheriff and collector's office belongs to the people and if I am elected, I expect to return it to the people. O believe my experience as an officer, farmer, taxpayer and father qualifies me for this office."

"It is a pleasure for me to know as many people as I do and the few that I do not know, I expect to see in the next 30 days."

"If elected, my motto is, 'Take the office back to the people, and give every man the privilege to make a better citizen.'"

Penney Speaks In Little Rock

Proper Development of Dairying Would Add to Farmers' Income

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, June 10.—J. C. Penney, founder and head of the nation-wide system of department stores which bear his name, and an agriculturist of note, spoke on the subject, "Constructive Forces in Southern Community Life," today at the Elks Luncheon Club.

Modern merchants, Mr. Penney said, are putting more value into the purchasing power of the dollar through cooperative buying or through group systems of stores.

New savings are being worked out for the benefit of the consumer.

In the old days retail merchants made competition a personal matter. They were antagonistic. Their differences were carried into the very structure of the community.

Today business men are playing fair with themselves and their communities. They avoid criticism of their neighbors and they work together to develop harmony between the varied business interests and to expand the trading influence of their town.

Farmers are cooperating, too, and through associations are studying diversification of crops. Whether diversification has been tried in the South it has resulted in increased income to the farmer.

Continuing, Mr. Penney said: "For many years, a major portion of my personal activities, outside of those which I have devoted to the affairs of the J. C. Penney Co., have been centered in the South."

For this reason, I feel particularly gratified for this opportunity to talk before a group of men who are representative of the South and of a section of this part of the country which is characterized by a steady advancement in constructive effort.

During the past few years it has been my great pleasure to be identified not alone with the commercial development of the South, but also with the agricultural development as well.

I have talked with your bankers and with your crop farmers; with your manufacturers and with your dairymen; with your educators and with the men and women who work your soil.

It is obvious, from the most superficial observations, that there is a great and as yet undeveloped revenue from diversified agriculture, waiting to be collected by the ambitious farmer.

Through associations, or cooperative bodies, the farmer should put himself in a position to know what crops his soil will raise, the demand for these crops, and whether or not he is in a position to raise them for the early market when prices are high.

Of late there has been a steadily growing tendency to diversify crops in the South. Where diversification has been given a fair trial it has resulted, as a general rule, in increased income for the farmer.

This section of the country offers unexcelled opportunities for profitable dairying. Climate and grazing conditions are exceptionally favorable. Dairy cattle thrive in your many months of open grazing each year.

Of course, any successful dairy project must start with the cow—that means with the dairy farmer himself.

In the past it has been the general tendency to look upon a cow as a cow and nothing more.

In the properly organized dairy farm, the cow is looked upon as a manufacturing plant, the business of which is to produce milk.

She must produce milk at a profit, and failing to do this, she is sent away to the slaughter house.

From a purely technical basis, the cow is a manufacturing plant which converts 85 per cent of what it takes in, by weight, into a complete and

Poultrymen Met Here Last Night

Plans of "Culling Week" Were Discussed By Several Members

An unusually interesting and beneficial meeting of the Hempstead County Poultry Association was held last night at the City Hall.

The meeting was called to order by President of the association George F. Dadds of this city. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Most of the discussion at the meeting was directed toward Arkansas "Culling Week," which will be held July 4 to 11. The days set aside for the culling demonstrations among Hempstead county flocks are Tuesday and Wednesday, July 8 and 9. On these dates Mr. Stinson of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and Mr. Knox of the University Extension service will be here to conduct these culling demonstrations.

Teams to select dates in the following communities were selected by the president: Palmox, Ozan, Green Luster, Blevens and Hope. It is planned to have twelve meetings throughout the county during the two days of the Hempstead county demonstrations. Two meetings will be held by each team a day, one at 9:30 A. M. and one at 2 P. M.

Mr. A. A. Gordon and Horace Thornton of the Prescott Association were among the visitors present at the meeting last night. Mr. Gordon spoke on one of the poultrymen's greatest dread along about the time their flocks enter production, "Chicken Pox." He suggested vaccination as a means of prevention.

The regular meeting night of the Hempstead county Association is the second Monday night of each month, but due to the fact that these demonstration teams will start out on Tuesday after the first Monday night, this will give Mr. Samuelson and Mr. Knox an opportunity to attend the meeting and become acquainted with the members of the association.

Tennessee, Knifed, In Critical Condition

MEMPHIS, June 10.—(AP)—Slashed across the throat and later pinned beneath a wrecked automobile, was rushing him to a hospital here, Johnnie Ticer, 28, Millington, Tenn., farmer, was reported to be in a critical condition today.

Two men were in jail and a third was sought as sheriff's deputies tried to fix the blame for the stabbing, which occurred yesterday at a dance near Millington, a suburb of Memphis. No warrants had been sworn out against those arrested.

Ticer's wife, sister-in-law and brother-in-law quarreled at the dance officers were told. Mrs. Ticer was slapped. Ticer was later found stabbed near the house where the dance was being held.

H. R. Dobbins, Kerrville, placed him in an automobile. The car wrecked on a curve. Dobbins' pelvic bone was fractured and Mrs. Ticer, accompanying them, was bruised. All were brought here in another car.

Justice Drives 1922 Model and Likes It

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark., June 10.—(UP)—J. F. Israel, 71, justice of peace, has driven his 1922 model auto more than 50,000 miles but insists to ambitious motor salesman that it is only beginning to perform.

Although thievery has depleted the "old faithful" of enough parts to build a new vehicle and a neighborhood gun battle has resulted in bullet holes in the upholstery, Justice Israel has always managed to repair the car for a continuance of its trying program.

Gunman Escapes After Shooting Newspaper Man

Reporter Pays With Life For His Knowledge of Underworld

MURDERER ESCAPES

Was En Route to Races at Washington Park When Slain

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—Jacob Lingle, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, was shot to death in the midst of a crowd of race fans in the Michigan boulevard tunnel of the Illinois Central railroad Monday.

A witness, "several paces behind Lingle, said he saw the killer slip up behind the reporter, level his weapon, and fire. Then he dropped the gun, dashed up the runway toward the station, vaulted over a fence and vanished into the boulevard crowd."

His weapon, an old style .45 calibre revolver, was found near the dead man.

Lingle was reputed to be one of the city's best informed newspaper men on gangland affairs.

Lingle had been a member of the Tribune staff nearly 20 years.

He was en route to the races at Washington Park when he was shot. Stores of commuters on their way to the special race train were panicked by the barking of a pistol in the subway under the walls of the public library, and the killer easily escaped in the confusion.

Gang Haunts Raided

Raid upon known haunts of gangsters were ordered by Commissioner Russell, and the first to be seized was Dominick Aiello, known as the sharp-shooter of the alcohol cooking band of Aiello. He was arrested in his apartment above the Aiello bakery. Conveniently at hand were two .45 caliber automatics and a loaded shotgun.

Incurred Enmity

Russell said he had discussed the matter with his friend, Lingle, and Lingle then had gone to Swanson and Roche, asking them to explain, "What McLaughlin had been given no privileges, Lingle later met McLaughlin and told him that he could not operate his gambling places, that the police and the state's attorney, men certainly would raid them. Roche said that McLaughlin exhibited anger toward Lingle, seeming inclined to blame him for the situation."

The Tribune has offered $25,000 as a reward for information which will lead to conviction of the slayer or slayers of Lingle. An additional reward of $5,000 was announced by the Chicago Evening Post on the same terms.

Mexican Flowers Now Invade N. Y. Markets

MEXICO CITY, June 10.—With the development of direct air transport service between Mexico City and New York a battle of flowers from Mexico and California seems imminent on the New York flower markets.

During recent months California flower growers have made use of aviation to deliver flowers to the New York market. Inasmuch as the flowers arrived in New York in condition, Mexican horticulturists feel that Mexican flowers can be shipped with equal success to New York.

Because of this abundance, fresh cut flowers sell cheaply in Mexico City. The attractive prices in New York will more than offset the cost of shipping by air, local horticulturists believe.

Little Rock Suffers Loss In Early Morning Blaze

Aged Recluse Robbed, Slain

Mutilated Body of Aged Man Is Found on Mountain

MARSHALL, June 10.—Alarmed because of the non-appearance of B. E. Wallace, aged 60, a farmer and recluse living about 10 miles south of here, neighbors went to his home Sunday and found his body in the garden at the home, bearing three gunshot wounds and badly mangled. Evidently the man had been dead four or five days. Robbery is believed to have been the motive. Wallace lived on Star mountain.

Wallace who came here from California about six months ago, and about whom little is known, is said to have been well-to-do and eccentric one of his eccentricities consisting in the carrying of large sums of money.

He is said to have been seen about Marshall and other places with $100 bills and others of large denomination, part of a considerable roll of currency. This and the fact that no money was found on his person or at his home makes the robbery theory feasible.

Wallace had been shot three times with a shotgun. Chickens in the yard had molested the body and it was almost unrecognizable.

Last Tuesday Wallace went to Kay and left corn with the miller and postmaster there, Dick Barnes, saying he would return for the corn and meal Thursday. He failed to appear and Sunday Barnes made inquiries and went to Star mountain and then to Wallace's home, accompanied by a neighbor.

A justice of the peace in the neighborhood is making an investigation, and County Judge Will Rice said he was going to the scene today.

Jobe Is Held To Grand Jury

LITTLE ROCK, June 10.—Charges of false pretense and forgery and uttering against H. Bradley Jobe, candidate for state commissioner of mines, manufactures and agriculture in 1928, were referred to the Pulaski grand jury after a hearing Monday morning in municipal court. Jobe was charged with obtaining $172.50 in October, for which he was arrested and later jumped bond.

Forgery and uttering charges in connection with checks for $15 and $35 also were referred to the grand jury. Jobe was arrested Friday on warrants charging him with the two check charges.

Union County Democratic Central Committee Meets

EL DORADO, Ark., June 10.—(AP)—The recent adoption by the Union County Democratic Central Committee of a resolution sent out by the State Democratic Central Committee defining qualification of voters is interpreted in some quarters as a move to bar bolters of the 1928 presidential ticket from the August 12 Democratic primary.

The county committee met for the purpose of settling the primary date, and the date for the closing of the ticket, the fixing of fees, and other matters.

The resolution which was adopted by the county committee reads in part in its definition of voters' qualifications for the coming primary:

"All white electors, both male and female, who have openly declared their allegiance to the principles and policies of the Democratic nominees at the last preceding election and who are in sympathy with the success of the Democratic party at the next succeeding election."

No statement as to what method would be used to challenge alleged bolters at the coming primary was made at the meeting of the county body.

All county and township candidates in Union county must file their pledges before noon, June 23, it was decided.

Camden Hearing Over Slaying Is Postponed

CAMDEN, June 10.—(AP)—The preliminary hearing of Hays Brown, Ouchitua county farmer, on a charge of murder for the killing of his neighbor, Cecil Dade, because the latter's three sons had trampled his truck garden trying to recover a baseball they had lost, was postponed Monday until today.

The killing occurred a week ago. Brown came here to surrender to officers following the shooting, saying that he lay dead on a road near their homes and shot him. He gave trouble with Dade's boys as the cause of his act.

FIREMAN INJURED

Second Disastrous Fire In Little Rock This Week

LITTLE ROCK, June 10.—(AP)—A spectacular early morning blaze today destroyed the Majestic Theatre, Little Rock's oldest and largest theatre.

The damage estimated by officials and owners was placed at around $200,000. This was the second blaze here within two days.

The Radio Keith Orpheum Circuit owned and operated the theatre while the building, a three-story brick structure was the property of the Jacob Blass estate.

Dallas officials of the Theatrical Syndicate estimated their loss at $100,000, and Gilbert Blass, in charge of the Blass estate declared theirs to be the same.

A negro watchman discovered the blaze shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. He said the fire seemed to start beneath the balcony near the projection room.

A battle of several hours was waged by firemen in an attempt to prevent the flames from spreading to other nearby buildings. The theatre building, however, was gutted, nothing but the walls were left standing.

Captain George Newberry of the fire department received a slight injury to his hand.

The F. W. Woolworth building, four blocks away, was destroyed in the same manner yesterday. The loss of the Woolworth building was estimated at approximately $200,000.

A journey to the moon is no longer a flight of fancy, says Robert Esnault-Pelterie, above, French scientist and president of the Society of Savants and Inventors of France. He foresees such trips in a rocket-propelled vehicle in 15 years. He has made and demonstrated the model of a rocket in which he believes such trips can be made.

Cord Man Held After Slaying

Earl Nuckolls Arrested on Warrant Charging Second Degree Murder

BATESVILLE, June 10.—(AP)—Earl Nuckolls of Cord, was arrested Monday for the killing of Jesse Barber, 35, who shot and killed his wife, Nuckolls' sister, in a vain effort at reconciliation after their second divorce.

Nuckolls was arrested this morning on a warrant charging second degree murder, which was issued by Prosecuting Attorney Hugh Williamson of Newport. He was released on bond until his preliminary hearing June 17.

Barber killed his wife and was killed by his brother-in-law, Nuckolls, in front of the latter's home at Cord Friday night. Nuckolls surrendered but was not held. He had been wounded slightly by Barber who first fired at him, and then turned the gun on his wife.

Jesse Barber was the brother of J. T. Barber, convicted slayer of Maurice Osborne, Cord merchant who was slain last July, and Mrs. Jesse Barber was the sister of Mrs. Norma Osborne the slain merchant's wife, who yesterday began the nine-year sentence she received for her part in the slaying of her husband. Mrs. Osborne and Barber had admitted illicit relations.

What the Treaty Does

MOST newspaper readers probably feel that everything that needs to be said about the London naval treaty has already been said, many times over; but since the president is going to call the Senate to meet in an extra session to consider the document, and since in certain quarters intensive efforts are being made to arouse new opposition to the treaty, it is evident that a little more discussion cannot be out of place.

In looking at the whole thing, one fact stands out—the admirals and big-navy men of the three countries chiefly involved—England, America and Japan—are unanimously in favor of the treaty. And when you compare their statements, they hardly make good sense.

Japan's big navy party swears that the treaty leaves Japan hopelessly inferior to the United States in a naval way. American admirals and a few senators retort that the treaty puts America below Japan's men as Winston Churchill protest that the treaty leaves the British navy almost helpless as compared with the American navy.

What are we to make of all this? All three parties can't be right. One treaty can't possibly make each of three countries inferior to the other two.

Obviously, the thing that is biting all of these admirals and big-navy spokesmen is the mere idea of naval limitation. These men sense that the London treaty, imperfect and mild as it most assuredly is, is only a beginning. This treaty, when you look at it closely, does very little reducing of any navy; in America's case, in fact, it calls for a billion dollars worth of building.

Why, then, all the fuss? Simply because the treaty is a new step, halting and uncertain as it may be, toward a general cutting down of limitation. The big-navy men of all countries, consequently will have none of it.

When you look at it in that light, you can see that the London treaty amounts to more as a move away from war than we have supposed.

Il Duce Wants No War

AFTER Mussolini had rattled the saber all over northern Italy, announcing to all and sundry that Italy was ready for trouble and that doubters had only to start something to find out about it, his government now makes a rather surprising about-face and offers to suspend its 1930 naval construction program if France will do the same.

This pacific offer comes in such sharp contrast to Mussolini's wild talk that in some quarters of Europe the good faith of this naval offer is openly doubted. It is hinted that it was made only for effect, that it never would have been put forward if Italy had had any notion that it would be accepted.

However, there is just a possibility that Mussolini may be engaged, now, in back-pedaling.

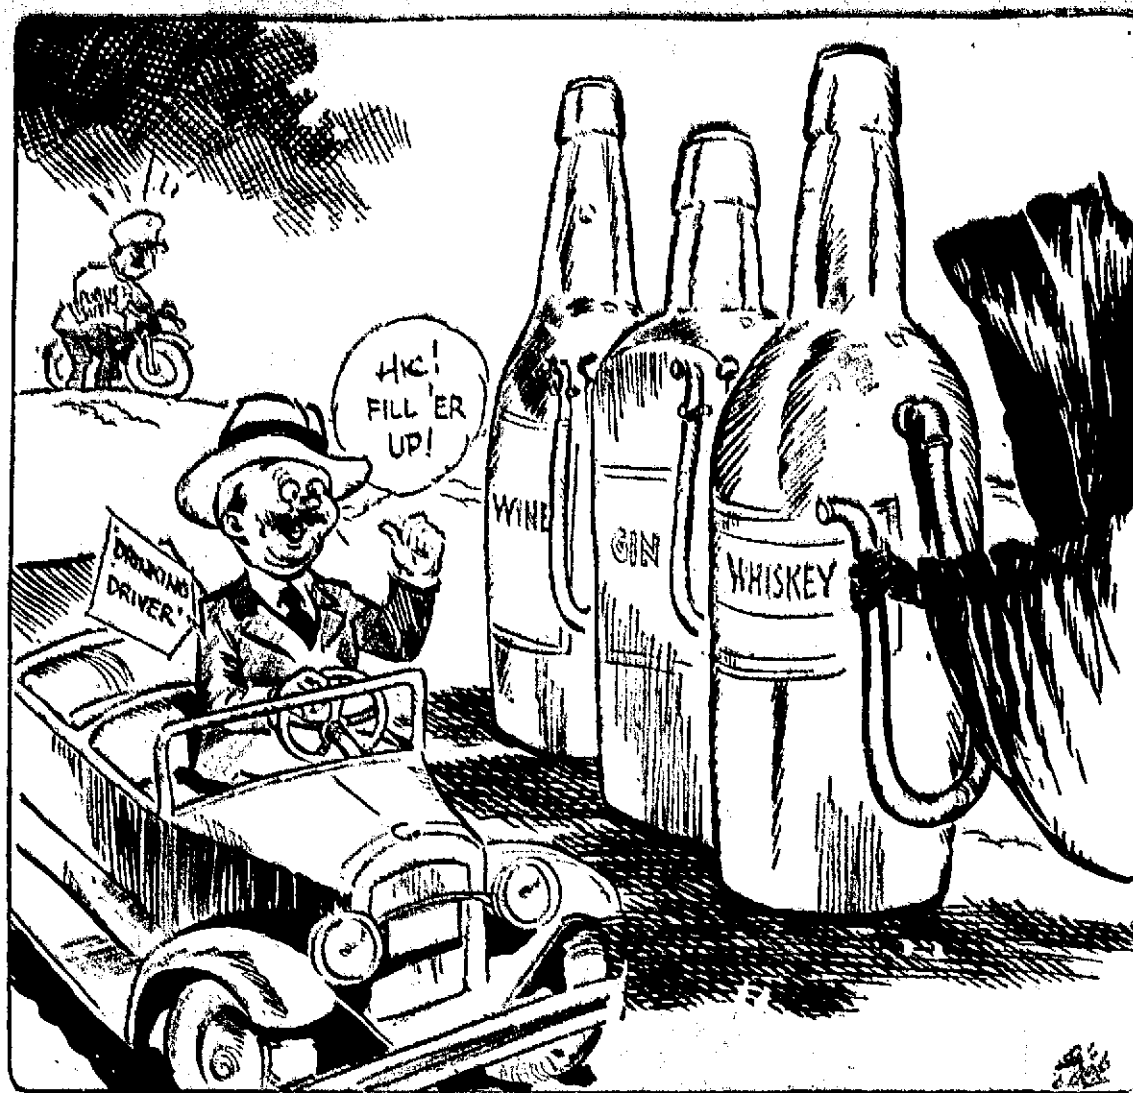

Having shouted war-like defiance until his throat is sore, the dictator may have decided that it would be just as well to undo that work by taking a step or two in the direction of peace.

There is this to remember, where Italy and Mussolini are concerned: neither the nation nor its leader wants war. The dictator and his advisers are thoroughly aware that Italian military strength is no match for that of France. A Franco-Italian war could not result in anything but a decisive defeat for Italy.

Mussolini, then, is not nearly as war-like as he sounds. He has the best of reasons for keeping the peace. But talking about war, and making defiant gestures, has one great advantage, from his viewpoint: it keeps the Italians from thinking too much about the domestic situation and prevents them from assaying their fiery dictator in a sober, unbiassed manner.

The word-rattlings of Mussolini, then, need not be taken seriously. They are for home consumption only. The one great danger is that Il Duce, by his wild appeals to passion and jingoism, may some day arouse a war-like bias that he will have to lead it to war whether he wants to or not.

The Wrong Kind of Filling Station!

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of four articles on the North Carolina Democratic primary, in which Senator Farnifold M. Simmons faces a sharp fight for re-nomination, written by Rodney Dutcher, Washington correspondent for this newspaper and NEA Service.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

(Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)
RALEIGH, N. C., May 20.—All little boys who hope to grow up and run against Senator Farnifold M. Simmons had better watch their step.

Josiah William Bailey is finding that out.

Josiah is 57 years old now, grown gray, conservative and rather set in his political ways. He has waged a silent campaign against Simmons for the Democratic senatorial nomination in the June 7 primary, almost solely on the issue created by Farnifold's denunciation of the national party in 1928.

But once upon a time Josiah was a gay, reckless young blood in his early twenties, heedless of the fact that he might some day desire to run against the venerable Farnifold. "Texas back in the eighteen-nineties."

Edited a Church Paper

As editor of the Biblical Recorder, leading Baptist publication in these parts, young Bailey appears to have had certain independent notions on issues which were controversial at the time but which have long since been settled to the satisfaction of all orthodox North Carolina Democrats.

Since the Simmons machine has disintegrated, the greatest strength of Farnifold is found in the fact that he led North Carolina's great White Supremacy Fight back in 1898, driving out the dominating fusion of Republicans, Populists and negroes. That fact is a very live issue today and no one talks politics in this state without bringing it up.

On the other hand, the Simmons bolt of 1928 is Farnifold's great weakness and the only thing that gave Bailey a chance to win.

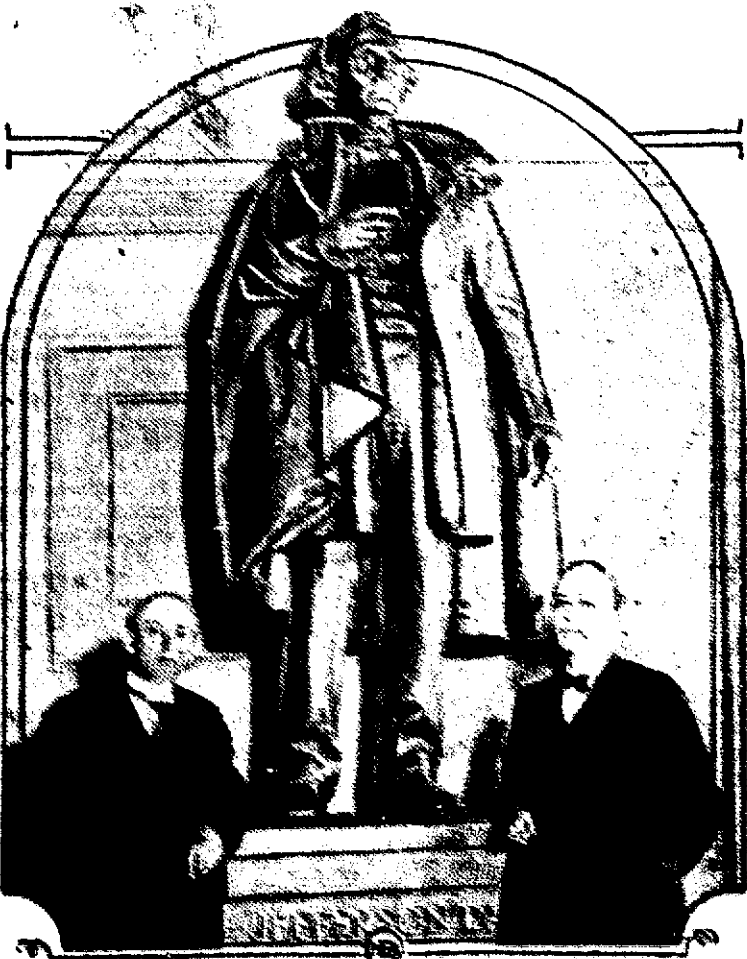

Conversely, one of Bailey's weakest points is that he was not as hot as he was over the White Supremacy issue more than 30 years ago as Simmons was and that he has not always been as radically dry as possible. Furthermore, Bailey is on record way, way back as asserting that he was an independent Democrat and admitting that he voted against a Democratic judge who was a chronic drunkard. These facts are powerful weapons in the hands of the Simmons faction—powerful to an almost incredible extent to a visitor from the north. The idea is to prove that Bailey is in no position to attack Simmons for lack of party loyalty.

Bailey was less than 20, the son of a Baptist minister, when he became editor of the Biblical Recorder. The Simmons forces are flooding the state with pamphlets to show that he opposed some of the more radical measures designed to keep negroes in their places, including the bill to provide separate cars for the races in 1899. "There is no sense, no providence, in running wild with opposition to the colored race," Bailey wrote. Denying negroes the right to vote, he said, would mean that the state's congressional representation must be reduced in proportion.

He opposed the impeachment of Governor Russell, Republican, and even served on the state Board of Agriculture with him. Worst of all he stood for appointment of Jim Young, negro, as the board's chief fertilizer inspector and is alleged to have voted for him.

Perhaps Josiah thought he had lived all that down, but after 32 years it arises as an issue to plague him sorely. The Simmons Democrats are reminding the state just how bad things were when negroes held office and voted.

Confederate President Honored

None's further evidence that the old sectional animosities engendered by the Civil War are not forgotten. The statue of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States, was unveiled at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Ark., May 20. Standing beside it are two men, one in a military uniform and one in a suit, both looking at the statue.

"War Mother" Never Had Child

When Tennessee women sail July 9 on their pilgrimage to France to visit graves of husbands and sons killed in the World War, among them will be Mrs. Lucy Carr, above, of Knoxville, a "mother" who never had a child. She is the step-mother of John Carr, a member of the 117th Infantry, 30th division, who was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery in action.

TRAGIC LIFE

DANCER IS HEROINE OF FASCINATING NEW LOVE STORY

Judith Grant, a Greenwich Village dancer, with a mop of short, red-gold hair, dark blue eyes and laughing mouth, is the principal character of a fascinating new serial novel "Dancing Judith" which begins Wednesday in the Hope Star.

Judith is ambitious and hopes to become a famous star, but she is unable to find much work in her chosen profession and is forced to turn to modeling to earn a living. She lives with the Clinton Marley, who lost her memory when her sweetheart, Alan Steyne, disappeared.

While dining in picturesque cafe in the Village, Judith meets Bruce Gideon, a middle-aged millionaire, who is attracted by her charm. Unknown to Judith, Gideon arranged for her to be starred in a stage production and she becomes a celebrity.

But just as she realizes her ambition, Judith discovers that Gideon's money and not her talent is responsible for her success and that he is really trying to win her love.

Don't fail to read what happens to this beautiful young girl in "Dancing Judith," beginning Wednesday, July 11 in The Star.

Sheriff and Citizen Exchanging Laughs

ELYRIA, Ohio, June 4.—The adage "he who laughs last laughs best" has been proved here in the form of a dry raid.

Sheriff Clarence Adams laughed heartily when August Yarkowski, of Graham, was fined $50 for possession of liquor. He was arrested during a "clean-up" raid on speakeasies.

Two weeks previous the sheriff raided Yarkowski's place unceremoniously, and it was reported that the alleged speakeasy proprietor laughed about the officer's failure.

Bones of Human Found on Farm

Recent Heavy Rainfall Discloses Bones of Human

PITTSBURG, Tex., June 9.—G. E.

Rumsey, farmer, exhibited the skull jaw bones and arm bones of a human skeleton that was washed up on his farm 12 miles east of here in the Holy Springs community.

Some who saw the bones believed them to be of an Indian buried many years ago, but others were of the opinion that they were in too good a state of preservation to have been buried that long.

Neighbors do not recall any missing man that it might have been, and it is not known whether the find was the bones of a man or woman, or of a white race.

Dr. R. C. Traynham, dentist, examined the jaw bones and teeth and declared that when the victim met death, he was probably between 40 and 45 years of age.

The find was made in a creek bottom on the Rumsey farm, and had apparently been buried about three feet deep, and without any box or coffin.

at the hour when lovers' vows at the hour when gentle winds and waters near the music to the lonely ear.

And in the sky the stars are met,
And on the wave is deeper blue,
And on the leaf a browner hue,
And in the heaven that clear ob-

Nevada's Only Millionaire

GEORGE WINGFIELD

RENO, Nev., June 6.—(AP)—Successfully cowboy, miner, "boom town" banker and hotel owner, George Wingfield, whose fortune grew from a $30 "grab stake," is now reputed to be the only millionaire in the only state which has only one.

Nevada's lone seven-figured capitalist is president of 20 banks, operates a chain of hotels, owns a number of mineral properties and possesses agricultural interests.

Wingfield represents his state as republican national committeeman, is a regent of the state university and maintains the only racing stables in the state.

Twenty-five years ago he was a cowboy in southeastern Oregon.

The late Senator George P. Nixon, Winnemucca banker put up the $50 which became the foundation of Wingfield's wealth.

It was a profitable investment for the senator, for young Wingfield, with a flair for business, eventually acquired control of the flourishing Goldfield Consolidated mine. He declared Nixon in on the deal and they are reputed to have divided $30,000,000 in profits.

Preferring to remain in the background, Wingfield has declined a United States senatorship.

When defalcations of $516,000 were discovered in the state treasury in 1927, Wingfield deposited a personal check for that amount in his Carson Valley bank, a state fund depository, as a loan to avert financial embarrassment to Nevada and possible unfavorable reaction on business and industry.

Bible School Open at Local Church

Vocation Course Each Morning at the First Presbyterian

Daily Vacation Bible School opened at the First Presbyterian church Monday morning with a splendid attendance, according to Miss Anna Louise Wiley, director in charge of the school.

Bible instruction is in charge of competent Bible students. The singing and music hour is an inspiration to young and old, according to those who attended the morning session.

The school has been organized into departments, according to the age of the students, each department with a superintendent, assistant and pianist.

Every church in the city was represented in the enrollment, with an exceptionally large number of children.

The vocational hour was apparently as joyful as it was instructive, according to report.

A good time for the children has been arranged for the recreational period each day. The school is to continue throughout the week. Every child in the city is invited and urged to attend these daily exercises, which start at 9 o'clock each morning at the Presbyterian church. W. R. Anderson, D. D., pastor of the church, has arranged the Bible school, to give a week's intensive Bible instruction, interspersed with suitable periods for playing and singing.

Those present at the short course will be given the same credit as though they had attended county institute for two days.

According to Dr. Harding, the short course program will be interesting and instructive since the faculties of 12 leading educational institutions of the state have been combined for the event. The speakers will be placed in a circuit and will appear on the program at each center.

Many county superintendents will call their teachers together for a one-day institute during the summer and will use the short course as the other required two days.

Two Day Short Courses Announced For Teachers

FAYETTEVILLE, June 9.—Dr. A. M. Harding, director of the general extension service of the University of Arkansas, announced a two-day short course for teachers which will be conducted by the state-wide extension service in cooperation with the state department of education, from September 29 to October 11.

The course will be given at each of 10 centers, chosen so that there will be little travel required of those who enroll. The locations named are: Ardmore, Batesville, Fayetteville, Fort Smith, Jonesboro, Magnolia, Marianna, Monticello, and probably Russellville and Nashville.

State teachers are required to attend county institutes three days each year. Those present at the short course will be given the same credit as though they had attended county institute for two days.

Use Parasites to Fight Dreaded Peach Moths

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 9.—Mass production of parasites that will be used to combat the Oriental peach moth in the great Connecticut orchards is under way here. The parasites being hatched at the rate of 200,000 a day in the state agricultural experiment station, are the Trichogramma Minuta, a wee fly that lays eggs in the eggs of the peach moth, and the Macrocentrus Ancylivora which looks like a mosquito, and lays eggs in the larvae of the peach moth. The peach moth caused damage of half a million dollars in the orchards of the state a year ago.

Two thirds of the area of the city and county of San Francisco is water, or of Marlinton, Texas, to a Pennsylvania poultryman for $50.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

NATALIE CONVERSE, jealous of her husband's friendship with BERNARDINE LAMONT, invites him. ALAN is contacted by his secretary, PHILIPPA WEST, who is seeking to make an advantage of Natalie returns, and Alan realizes that he loves her, but the engagement into which Philip has cleverly slipped to get him prevents him from attempting a reconciliation. Philip refuses to release him.

Alan returns to his home when Natalie appears to him in an emergency, but the divorcee's feeling for Philip keeps her standing between them. Natalie goes to Alan's office and there meets Bernardine. Her old jealous fires flare up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan. As a result he drives with Philip. He does not go home that night. The next day Natalie comes to the office to plead for forgiveness, but Alan is out. She waits a while in his private office, then departs in despair.

Philip, fearful that Alan's anger should not endure, pleads to discontinue Natalie. In a letter she changes the name of a stock Bernardine wants to sell that he is to sell. Bernardine comes to the office after the order has gone through, and discovers the change that has been made. In the excitement that follows Philip directs suspicion at Natalie. Alan believes her guilty and goes up to Billings to accuse her.

Natalie is stricken to utter hopelessness. Alan leaves her and goes to Bernardine to make good her losses. Not long afterward she dies and Alan turns to Philip to help him care for Bobby, Bernardine's young son. Natalie, in Philadelphia, sends of Bernardine's death. She returns to make a last plea for a reconciliation. Alan misunderstands her motive and tells her he is going to marry Philip West when he is free. Natalie says good-bye to him. He goes to Philip, who is disinterested with her position in Bernardine's house looking after Bobby. She is determined not to be burdened with the child.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

PHILIPPA'S tones, as she talked with Alan by telephone, quickly changed from imperiousness to their former gentle meekness. His gruffness startled and alarmed her. She was furious because she was compelled to resort to the role she had thought she could abandon, but she trusted it to disarm Alan, and it did. He told her he was sorry to be late, that he would be up shortly.

He had no desire to quarrel with Philip. He told himself, settled dejectedly in a seat on the train. She was wonderful all through everything. Wonderful with Bobby, wonderful to him.

His brows creased a little over his thoughts. Bobby didn't seem to like Philip. But he was a polite little beggar, he behaved well. "He will get over it. Probably resents Philip's authority with some childish idea that she's taken his mother's place by force."

Alan was feeling very tender toward Philip when he reached Westchester, very deliberately tender.

He bought flowers to take Philip, and if they were to him in the nature of a funeral offering for his buried hopes, he was determined that Philip should not know it.

Philip accepted the flowers with gratifying appreciation. But she guessed they were meant to satisfy some conscience of soul impulse of Alan's. She looked at him through narrowed eyelids. What had happened?

She saw that she should not ask; but there was that in his face that indicated a coming revelation of some kind. She waited, and made him as comfortable as she could.

"Philip," Alan said abruptly, "do you realize that when you accept me, you have to take Bobby as well? You're fond of the little fellow, aren't you?"

Philip wondered if he asked because she had refused to take Bobby on the drive with them. "Why, of course I am," she responded promptly. "And naturally I know that you're his guardian."

Alan turned his head for an instant and looked at her. "Didn't I ever tell you that I'm going to adopt him?" he asked.

"No," Philip said sharply, then: "I thought you were going to put him in a school."

"Would it make any difference to you if I adopt him?" Alan questioned.

Philip hesitated. She didn't like his mood, but she had to take a stand now or never, and she certainly wasn't going to have him adopt the kid.

"Well," she said slowly, "you know I told you once, Alan, that I'd like to have children of my own."

If she expected to stir him, she was disappointed. "Bobby's just like a child of my own to me," Alan answered instantly.

"But not to me," Philip snapped back, before she could stop herself. "To be sure, he's a darling, and all that, but why start that way with an adopted child? You'd be sorry when..."

"I couldn't love any child any more than I do Bobby," Alan retorted. "And the sooner I adopt him, the better I'll like it."

"But I won't..." Philip stopped herself this time, but she was on the verge of a furious outburst of temper. "You might have told me before," she said curtly. "It's a lot to ask. You know that don't you?"

"I suppose it is," Alan agreed, "but when I think of Bobby, I wonder how anyone could fail to want him."

"Oh, well," Philip hedged, "no girl wants to settle down with a ready-made family, but if it means so much to you..."

"I knew you'd come through," Alan broke in enthusiastically.

Philip frowned, and jerked her shoulders. "I wish you would think it over a little more," she said pettishly. "After all, you know, Alan, you've asked me to be your wife, and you haven't been any too thoughtful or considerate at times. You ought to think of me as well as Bobby."

Alan was conscious that she spoke the truth. He recalled how he neglected her in the hope that she would let him go. And perhaps he was asking her to assume too great a burden. But he wouldn't give up Bobby!

His lips set tight in resolve on that subject. They drove back home without further discussion of Bobby, though the little boy was uppermost in the minds of both.

PHILIPPA, misled by Alan's silence into thinking she had made a good start toward bringing Alan to her own view of the situation, decided to institute a campaign to discourage him from going through with the adoption.

And Alan made up his mind to say nothing about his plans to Philip. He felt guilty over his decision, but he had told her plainly how he felt toward Bobby, and he sensed that she meant to oppose him. He dreaded the undercover methods he feared he'd employ—the constant harping out the wrongs of his side of the question, and the unending flouting of her rights.

He knew she could make him feel like a selfish monster, and he didn't want to feel that way. He wanted to be happy in the thought of having little Bobby as his own. Legally, in teaching him to say "Daddy."

With a flare of resentment toward all women, he declared—to himself—that he had a right to a little happiness at least. He would go ahead with his plans, and keep his mouth shut!

Alan was not certain he had seen Philip push the boy's hands away from her when he wanted to go with them as they were leaving the house, but he remembered the sharpness of her voice as she said: "It's time for you to be in bed; run along."

That, "Please take me with you," coming in a pitifully pleading voice still echoed in his ears. Nellie's sulky: "He won't sleep anyway, miss," he remembered too. But Philip had been firm.

"And I didn't go up to say good night to him when we got back," Alan reproached himself. He awoke the next morning in a bad humor. He would see his lawyer at once.

Philip telephoned while he was at breakfast, to say she was coming down to do some shopping and that she wanted him to lunch with her. Her voice was sweetly coaxing.

Alan was seized with a desire to find out just how sincere she was. "I can't see you," he said brusquely. "I have an appointment with my lawyer."

"With your lawyer?" Philip repeated uneasily.

"Yes, I'm going to adopt Bobby as soon as possible," Alan answered.

He heard a smothered gasp, and a bang as the telephone receiver was slammed in place.

A LITTLE later, when Philip called again to try to undo what her temper had done, Alan was on his way to his office.
